MINING BILL GOES THROUGH. Callis called up the mining bill, ve-toed by the governor, and Robinson defended the veto. He believed the governor's objections were well found-passed. Dresser thought the measure was satisfactory to a majority of those who had originally opposed it. The expense involved would amount to a small figure and he hoped the bill would pass. Whereier spoke against the bill and declared the miners were opposed to it. If it were passed he did not believe any mining camp would ever return another Democrat to the legislature.

APPROPRIATION LIST.

The general appropriation bill, the most important matter remaining to be acted upon, was then taken up and Taylor, a member of the committe, arose to make a general statement. The greatest care had been taken, he said, to keep the appropriations within a reasonable limit. There had been some criticisms of the large amounts appropriated for the state institutions, but the state had created these institutions and it must sustain them. There had also been criticism of the salaries paid to clerks in the state offices, and members had offered to furnish competent men for half the amount paid. It was true that during a time of depression men might be driven by their percentiles to work for helf the

with a communication announcing the amendments.

Much surprise and indignation was expressed over the unusual course pursued by the senate. Sloan moved that the house refuse to receive the communication, or to take cognizance of the alleged amendment. He took the position that, having been pussed by both house and placed in the hands of the house engrossing committee, it was not subject to amendment by the senate. He spoke bitterly of the discourtery shown the lower house by the senate in other matters, and gave notice that if the house yielded and failed to preserve its dignity in this instance, he no longer wished to be considered a member of the Utah legislature.

Shepard claimed the resolution had not been in the possession of the senate when it undertook to amend it, and therefore it had no jurisdiction.

Hansien and Duffin counseled moderation and Price and A. P. Sorensen believed the senate had acted wisely in reducing the appropriation.

Finally, on Wilson's motion, the whole subject was referred to the steering committee, of which Sloan was chairman. Old Suit of Hyams vs. Bamberger Again to the Front-Will of Elizabeth Thompson Filed For Consideration of the appropriations bill was then resumed and D. S. Cook offered an amendment reducing the appropriation for the University of Utah from $1,000 to $22,750, and reducing the period covered from two and a half years to two years. The appropriation in the bill was designed to carry the institution to the close of the academic year in 1899, but he did not believe this legislature should appropriate for a longer period than two years.

The plaintiff alleges that his dwelling house, barn and outhouses were located near the bank of the surplus canal. The defendant constructed a sewer and conveyed a large quantity of sewerage into the canal with the result that plaintiff's land and premises have been overflowed and covered with the offensive matter so that he could neither live there himself nor rent the premises to anyone else. HYAMS VS. BAMBERGER.

An Old Suit Makes Its Appearance Again.

The old suit of Louis Hyams and John A. Irvine against Simon Bamberger and O. J. Salisbury, the issues of which have been before the courts for years in one form or another, has taken a fresh start by the plaintiff fling a new complaint in the district court.

The plaintiffs allege that on May II. 1891, they borrowed from the defendants $8,000 and gave two promissory notes of John Beck for $14,719.29, and the Beck notes were secured by J.000 shares of Bullion-Beck stock, which went to secure the notes given by the plaintiffs. It is then salleged that the defendants secretly sold Beck's notes and the Bullion-Beck stock to Mr. Beck for $10,000 in cash, about $1,500 in excess of the sum owing the defendants by these plaintiffs.

Plaintiffs allege that the Beck notes and the Bullion-Beck stock were worth and the Bulli added the folmation of the control o
